JOHN BERGER Seeing comes before words. The child looks first before it can speak. But there is also another sense in which seeing before words. It is seeing which establishes our place in the world; we explain that world with words, and can never undo the fact that we are surrounded by the relation between what we see and what we know is settled.

Having established that we see first and then use words to explain the world, i.e. what we know, he then goes on to say what we know or believe affects the way we see things. This makes it a dynamic relationship; it may start with seeing and recognition, but develops into a system in which our past experience or knowledge changes the way we see things.
